

The Magnificence of God

♩ = c. 87

1. The mag - nif - i - cence of God out - shines what mor - tals can con - ceive,
2. When the gath - ered con - gre - ga - tion feels en - cour - aged in its song
3. With their end - less pos - si - bil - i - ties and myr - i - ad of sounds,
4. In our psalms and hymns and sa - cred songs, the tunes come from the heart.

and the vast - ness of the un - i - verse, be - yond what we per - ceive.
by the or - gan's pow'r to mo - ti - vate, each voice is clear and strong.
or - gans il - lus - trate di - ver - si - ty that, in this world, a - bounds,
Then the or - gan's breath u - nites with ours, cre - at - ing vi - brant art.

Yet, the or - gan's gran - deur seems to bridge the hu - man and di - vine
But the or - gan has the pow'r to soothe with dul - cet har - mon - ies teach - ing us to val - ue dif - f'renc - es with all re - spect - ful - ness
As the ev - er - chang - ing mu - sic swells, our God makes all things new, with its var - ied reg - is - tra - tions and a mul - ti - plex de - sign.

that as - sures us of God's ten - der care through all ad - ver - si - ties.
and, with grac - ious in - clu - siv - i - ty, reach out, ac - cept, and bless.
and the ech - oes of our blend - ed praise re - sound our whole lives through.
